

Margaux Collins Summer 2015 Fieldwork

Here is some information regarding my field school experience this summer!

The three weeks I spent in Isla Mujeres for field school were definitely filled with incredibly insightful and influential experiences that allowed me to grow in my methods and understanding of ethnography. Along with practicing my methods through a variety of ethnographic assignments to familiarize myself with the island, people and culture, I was also able to serve as a research assistant studying alcoholism on the island. In this respect, I participated in multiple meetings and interviews with DIF (Desarrollo Integral de la Familia) officials and helped form a survey that will be implemented in each classroom in Isla from grades 1-12 regarding alcohol and it's impact on each student's life.
