PRACTICING ANTHROPOLOGY IN "THE REAL WORLD"

Anthropology is a very broad discipline, with lots of skills and perspectives that can be transferred beyond academia.

However, sometimes it can be difficult to identify these skills, or how to transfer them into practice. Sometimes, we can even struggle to explain to our families what it means!

Don't worry—we got you!

WHEN? MONDAY, MARCH 19TH, 2018, 2:00-3:30 PM

WHERE? DUNCAN STUDENT CENTER, W210 MEETING ROOM

Come join us for a conversation on what to do with an anthropology degree, how to develop practical skills, and how to identify jobs where you can use those skills.

PRACTICING ANTHROPOLOGY IN "THE REAL WORLD"

Meet our panelists!

Leslie Kirchler-Owen, Ph.D
Ecology & Environment, Inc.

Dr. Kirchler-Owen has served as the principal investigator responsible for archaeological analyses and historic structure surveys in cultural resource management. She routinely consults with federal, state, and local agencies, Indian tribes, and the private sector. She specializes in landscape characterizations and the development of interpretative programming for historic sites.

Rita Denny, Ph.D
Practica Group, LLC

Dr. Denny is interested in consumer behavior around the globe. Her work supports strategic development of products, services and brands as well as communications strategies for Fortune Global 500 companies, government agencies and public institutions. She is the author of Doing Anthropology in Consumer Research and editor of Handbook of Anthropology in Business.

Elizabeth K. Briody, Ph.D.
Cultural Keys, LLC

Dr. Brody is a cultural anthropologist and founder of Cultural Keys LLC. She helps organizations understand and transform their culture so that they are more effective in the global marketplace, by focusing on employee empowerment and strengthening relationships with business partners and providers.

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME
College of Arts and Letters

When? Monday, March 19th, 2018, 2:00-3:30 pm

Where? Duncan Student Center, W210 Meeting Room