

Katie Benz Summer 2015 Fieldwork

This summer I was an intern for the Exhibit Planning and Development office at the National Zoo in Washington DC. The purpose of my internship was to contribute to education on wildlife trafficking with a focus on African elephants and ivory by collaborating with the various branches of the Smithsonian. I was also working behind the scenes for various enrichment projects of animal exhibits throughout the park.

The two posters are ones I created for the Zoos wildlife trafficking day that occurred August 8th. The other photographs are of various animals that I was able to learn about more extensively from behind the scenes of the Zoo.
