

The Initiative on Race and Resilience & The Department of Anthropology Present:
When and Where I Enter:
Curatorial Representation and Impact

Ariana Curtis

Curator for Latinx Studies, National Museum of African American History and Culture
Director of Content, Our Shared Future: Reckoning with Our Racial Past

Wednesday, February 2, 2022

4:00 P.M. EST

Via Zoom

From her time at the Anacostia Community Museum to the National Museum of African American History and Culture and even now in her current position with the Smithsonian's

Our Shared Future: Reckoning with Our Racial Past, Dr. Ariana Curtis has always been "the first" in her roles. Her nine-year Smithsonian career has been a mix of preparedness, willingness, and serendipity. In this presentation, Dr. Curtis will talk about the personal and professional impacts of her presence as a Black Latina anthropologist curator at the Smithsonian Institution.

To register, please visit
<https://anthropology.nd.edu/news-events/>

UNIVERSITY OF
NOTRE DAME